Social sciences as defined in the Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences by Edwin R. A. Seligman are “those mental or cultural sciences which deal with the activities of the individual as a member of a group.” The major disciplines under social sciences include anthropology, economics, geography, history, law, political science, psychiatry, psychology, sociology and statistics. Seligman also mentioned about semi-social sciences like ethics, education, philosophy and psychology and sciences with social implications like biology, geography, medicine, linguistics and art. These disciplines do not only reflect a sustained dedication to critical, interdisciplinary approaches to the study of social relations, social structures, social identities and social phenomena but are also concerned with the society and the relationships of individuals within the society. These various disciplines are therefore essential in understanding diverse social issues and concerns that affect not only the youths and the nations of the world but the whole humanity as well.

Founded on the importance of the disciplines, principles and values of social sciences, the Borres Youth Leadership Institute or BYLI organized the International Social Science Camp (ISSC). It provides avenues and opportunities for young people to develop their basic understanding of the various disciplines of social sciences that will equip them with the knowledge and skills in becoming a socially aware, responsible and active students and citizens and set a ground for leadership development and for creating a community of young and responsible global leaders of tomorrow.

“We need the social sciences in order to address the challenges of global change. Social scientists bring a wealth of knowledge about processes of social transformation that will be critical to dealing with issues of environmental change and sustainability”.

Alberto Martinelli, President, International Social Science Council

At the camp, local delegates will have the opportunity to understand and appreciate some disciplines of social sciences. Understanding these disciplines will truly support the declared policy of the Republic of the Philippines under Republic Act No. 10533 otherwise known as the “Enhanced Basic Education Act of 2013” to produce “graduates of basic education who are empowered individuals who have learned, x x x x the foundations for learning throughout life, the competence to engage in work and be productive, the ability to coexist in fruitful harmony with local and global communities, the capability to engage in autonomous, creative, and critical thinking, and the capacity and willingness to transform others and one’s self.”

Through ISSC, foreign and local delegates from ASEAN member countries will help strengthen the goal of ASEAN Community Integration of building ONE ASEAN Identity. They will create a sense of belongingness, consolidate unity in diversity and enhance deeper mutual understanding about culture, history, religion, and civilization. They will also promote cultural exchange and understanding about the unique history of different people and the cultural similarities and differences. Other foreign delegates at the ISSC will provide support to the prominent role in youth development of the World Program of Action for Youth of the United Nations as the camp offers opportunities for them to effectively participate in society through discussions on national and global issues and understanding cultural diversity.

Create – one strong community of young global leaders who will become catalysts for change.

Innovate – ideas into actions to face and address global challenges and issues.

Change – one's self and society to impact social institutions and the world.

OBJECTIVES:

The camp aims to:

- Awaken the delegates' interest in learning the fields of social sciences;
- Develop delegates' awareness of and concern for social issues in personal, social, environmental and technological contexts;
- Provide opportunities for youth and professional leadership development;
- Facilitate professional development training for teacher-participants of the camp; and
- Create a network and community of young and professional global leaders who are catalyst for change.

THEME:

“Promoting and Accelerating Sustainable Development Goals”

RATIONALE OF THE THEME:

To end poverty is the greatest global challenge and an indispensable element for sustainable development. On 25 September 2015 at the United Nations General Assembly, 193 member-states adopted the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, which includes a set of 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) to end poverty, fight inequality and injustice, and tackle climate change by 2030.

BYLI believes that many of the global challenges today affect the future of the youth as the leaders of the next generation and of every individual in the community. They must therefore be equipped with valuable knowledge and skills to combat global challenges. BYLI stands firm that the youth and every individual's roles must be defined with innovative ideas and actions so that the goals of Sustainable Development Agenda will be promoted and accelerated.
